Bio:

Jeffery Jones is a fashion photographer based in New York. Born and raised in Southern California, he earned his MFA in photography from Art Center College of Design. His work combines a minimal and raw aesthetic with the romanticism of fashion. He relies heavily on his instinct for non-traditional subjects which are paramount to his approach. Recent editorial collaborations include Kenzo, Eckhaus Latta, and Acne Studios. His photography has exhibited at 303 Gallery in New York and most recently a series of abstract paintings at That That Gallery in Los Angeles.

About the Project:

Artist, musician, & surfer, Alex Knost has experimented within the surfing subculture for over a decade, submerging his interest in vintage surfboard design as well as a range of various artistic mediums. Surfer Magazine has called Knost "unlike any other surfer in the world", drawing from 60's and 70's technique for poised, imaginative, eccentric form. He has traveled internationally creating and exhibiting various bodies of work in the form of paintings, films, photography, sculpture and music. Most recently his photography and sculptures were exhibited at Acne Studios Tokyo, Depart Foundation Los Angeles and 303 gallery New York.

Jeffery Jones has photographed Alex's life for more than a decade, documenting a remarkable part of the experience. The collaboration with Acne Studios draws from their Spring/ Summer 2018 collection and highlights Alex's effortless approach to his own personal style.

Designer: Acne Studios SS18 Collection.
